Uniting the L. 7, 000, 000 to the L. 6, 274, 579, we have an accumulated charge of L. 13, 274, 579. Strange to say, this still falls considerably short of the Civil Expenditure. On looking into Parliamentary papers, it will be found that there remain numerous payments from the Woods and Forests, the Board of Trustees in Scotland, and other hereditary revenues; while there do not appear to be any recognisable account of those salaries and allowances exclusively chargeable on fees of office. Reckoning up the various branches of outlay, the lowest estimate we can form of the cost of the Civil Government is Fourteen Millions--a sum which, according to the census return of 1841, is dispensed among 16,...
