His answer included Christinas poetry as well, and showed the keenness of his critical incision. Yes; we scarcely take to the Rossetti poetry; it does not come home to us; it is exotic; but we like Christinas religious pieces. The novels are wonderful works with all their faults. Guy Mannering and St. Ronaris Well--neither of which I knew before--delighted me extremely. Another I read is the Fair Maid of Perth, which is on a level with the Victoria Drama in some respects, but in some points of conception and vivid reality in parts can only be compared to the greatest imaginative works existing. I am sorry Miss Boyd is not to return with you, as it will thus be some time before we benefit by the society of Htiffer, Boyce, or our old friend Tacitus. Will you give her my love and believe me your affectionate Gabriel. P. S. --I hear through William that the proposal to move our fathers remains being negatived--by my mothers objections, a memorial is to be erected to him in Santa Croce, Florence. And so the one-sided correspondence ends. I may, however, make a finale by quoting a distich on his poor lost friend the Woodchuck, which I have somehow preserved, while losing the leaf of his last letter on which it must have been written. The title Parted Love is chaff directed to my Sonnets so called, which he held to the highest...
