During the year the bureau found it necessary to call the attention of State officials to the great and growing need for more adequate laws for the protection of food and game fishes. This need applies to the Southern States more than to any other section, as waters that were once teeming with various species of fish are now becoming depleted, owing largely to the increase of tourist fishermen. The waters of the Southern States are naturally very pro-ductive, more so, possibly, than those of any other part of the United States, and owing to the abundance of natural food developed in them biiss and other species grow to large size. In some sections the fish receive no protection whatever during the spawning season, when fishing should be absolutely prohibited. Many States have shown a deep interest in this matter, and in response to the bureau s recommendations have expressed the intention of bringing about the needed reforms in fishery legislation. The most notable example is Texas, which has recently passed special legislation covering the protection of bass and most of its important food fishes. Mutually profitable cooperative relations have continued between the bureau and the Canadian fisheries authorities. Exchanges of Atlantic salmon eggs for eggs of the rainbow, brook, and blackspotted trouts have been made, and the collections of whitefish and cisco eggs in the Great Lakes regions have been largely increased by the fact that the Canadian authorities allowed the...
