Well, Edward, now that the war is over and the country no longer needs my services, the time approaches when you and I must part. On that fearful night of long ago when I realized that I in all probability was a murderer, I vowed to Heaven that I would be dead to all I called dear on earth unless my innocence was fully established. Heaven has willed that we should meet for a time to help carry out the glorious work of freedom. That work has been accomplished, and all that remains for me is to retire once more from the world and await the summons to the final tribunal which can never err in judgment. Edward. Don t talk so, father. Do...
