Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Excerpt from Some Investigations of Commercial Telephone Transmitters Great strides have been made in telephony since 1876 when Alexander Graham Bell obtained his first telephone patents. More especially has the telephone been put to use in cities, towns, and prosperous communities. In our north-central and eastern states telephone wires connect long chains of country residences. These are woven into a network with the cities and towns as centers. Except by the great Bell Telephone Company, little attention had been paid to connecting these centers with wires for talking purposes until within the last two or three years.
