The lives of Wilbur and Orville Wright are quintessential American stories. Growing up in America s heartland, the boys lived very ordinary lives with 5 other siblings and worked in printing jobs and repair jobs that involved tinkering with tools and bicycles. But at the end of the 20th century, one of the brothers passions became an obsession, especially for Wilbur, who would later write, My brother and I became seriously interested in the problem of human flight in 1899. In December 1903, the brothers had done enough scientific work with concepts like lift to help their aeronautical designs, and they had the technical know-how to work with engines. On December 17, the brothers took turns making history s first successful powered flights. The fourth and final flight lasted nearly a minute and covered nearly 900 feet. Wilbur would work in aviation until dying of typhoid at the age of 45 in 1912, and by the time Orville died in 1948, planes had nearly reached supersonic speeds, a far cry from the days of bicycles and carriages he knew as a kid. In 1927, Charles Lindbergh became the first to make a nonstop Transatlantic solo flight, forever earning him fame and the moniker Lucky Lindy. Two years later, Earhart was the first woman to cross the Atlantic in a plane, and her uncanny resemblance to Lindbergh earned her the nickname Lady Lindy. Together they became America s most famous aviators, and their stories were inextricably interwoven by their lives, careers, and ill-fated destinies. In many ways, Charles Lindbergh represented the best and worst of America during the...
