Excerpt from The Story of Cotton After cotton is harvested, it is transported by truck or trailer to the gins where the seed cotton is conditioned and cleaned and the fibers are separated from the seed. The fibers after being separated from the seed are called lint, In a single pound of cotton there may be 100 million or more individual fibers. The lint cotton is pressed and packaged into bales at the gin for convenience in handling and the seed is loaded into trucks or freight cars for shipment to oil mills. In 1972, almost cotton gins in this country were operated through a season ranging from 3 to 6 months. Many of these gins located in the high production areas operate on a 24 hour, 7-day - week basis. Modern cotton gins are equipped with improved machinery for drying and cleaning the seed cotton and for cleaning the lint after it is ginned and before it is packaged into bales.
