Createspace Independent Publishing Platform, United States, 2016. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Calliope sings her song, but then her voice inexplicably becomes drowned out, leaving Infinity to sing the last of her song. That song tells the story of a woman lost at sea who hears a woman in distress from ancient times. A dark ruler punishes her by forcing her voice to be trapped in an echo. The echo travels thousands of years in order to reach the point where the woman lost at sea finds her way home. Infinity sings the last of the song so that the woman lost at sea can find her way home and for the other woman s echo to become freed from its perpetual echo. A broken marble visage greets her eyes. She has been here. She has seen this moment unfold. It has already happened, but her voice remains unheard, untextured by time. She is frozen in her own heart s secret infinity. Sing, Muse, sing, a voice says. But her own voice falters in its epic reply. All she can do is soak her heart into the fragrant depths of a poetry unspoken. A poetry that moves along the rhythms of the ocean. She yearns for her voice to come out. But she must wait. She knows it. She cannot yet sing. Her slender frame moves across the room like a whisper in the wind. This familiarity becomes even more familiar. Her mind races. The marble statue s fragmented cheek strikes her elusive core, and then her sight drifts beyond the flawed curvature to focus on the marble eyes. She sees how the marble eyes gaze at infinity, and then she loses all focus. Something echoes from afar, deep through rich olive...
